Economy

Growth in the Nova Scotia economy is expected to accelerate this year, with RBC Economics forecasting real GDP growth of 1.3% in 2016. The continuation of construction throughout Halifax is a contributing factor for this growth as construction activities begin to ramp up due to fast approaching completion dates. Another factor in the growth forecast are exports, which are still benefiting from a weaker Canadian dollar. Natural gas production however, only represents a small portion of exports. If its production continues to decline, it will no longer have a significant impact on the overall export growth in Nova Scotia. Looking to 2017, construction activity will most likely begin to slow as both major residential and non-residential projects are completed, contributing to GDP forecasted growth falling to 1.1% in 2017.

Market Overview

Overall, Nova Scotia's office vacancy rate remained relatively steady at 14.0% in the second quarter of 2016. However, there were some vacancy fluctuations within each submarket. Halifax's Central Business District (CBD) vacancy rate rose to 14.6% from 14.3% last quarter as all three classes saw negative absorption. The largest transaction this quarter involved Université Sainte-Anne which leased close to 16,000 square feet (sf) at 1190 Barrington Street. The Suburban market vacancy rate increased to 13.4% from 12.9% last quarter as the completion of 145 Hobson Lake Drive and 3138 Isleville Street brought new vacancy to the market.

Outlook

With Great Britain voting to leave the European Union, there is a lot of uncertainty concerning the ramifications. John Forrester, EMEA Chief Executive of Cushman & Wakefield weighed in stating "we are entering a period of unprecedented change as markets and sectors begin to adapt". However, Brian Krieter, Executive Managing Director for Valuation & Advisory Canada believes there is a potentially positive outcome for the Canadian market, stating; "There is a phenomenal amount of capital that's looking to be placed in commercial real estate, and it's very fluid. Foreign investors view Canada as an island of certainty."

Closer to home in early May the Armour Group Ltd. and the Waterfront Development announced the Queen's Marque district development. This $200 million project will include a hotel, a variety of office spaces, and a residential building; combined with open public space with a courtyard and roughly 23,000 square meters of plazas.
