

ECONOMY

Nova Scotia's labour market remained relatively stable in February 2026, with employment declining marginally since Q4 2025. The unemployment rate increased 20 basis points (bps) from Q4 2025 to 7.1% driven by a rise in labour force participation rather than material job losses. Full-time employment declined while part-time employment increased, indicating a modest shift in employment composition. Overall, the province continues to report a stable labour market with slight short-term softening.

SUPPLY AND DEMAND

Vacancy in the Halifax industrial market rose to 11.0% in Q1 2026, a 70 bps increase from the previous quarter. From a demand-focused perspective, Burnside has been the key driver for years, and it continues to show its strength and status in the market with roughly 19k square feet (sf) of positive absorption this quarter. The Bayers Lake submarket is one to watch, as more businesses are making moves into the new buildings on 29 Dugger McNeil Drive and Julius Boulevard. As a result, vacancy is anticipated to remain relatively flat in the short term but rise over time once Burnside phases 13 and 14 are complete over the next few years.

Overall absorption in the Halifax industrial market remained in positive territory this quarter at 33k sf. The positive absorption this quarter was primarily located in Burnside with approximately 19k sf. The Bayers Lake submarket also had positive absorption this quarter reaching approximately 13k sf, while the remaining submarkets had minimal, yet still positive, absorption. While there was less leasing activity compared to Q4 2025, the need for high-quality, new space is still evident. Builders should watch the proposed growth of Bayers Lake and Burnside, as there is always new work to be done.

PRICING

The Halifax industrial overall average net asking rent reached $13.24 per square foot in Q1 2026. This was primarily driven by slight quarter-over-quarter increases in the average net rent for each submarket and is believed to be an accurate weighted representation of asking rates and occupier's current rates. The market will continue to witness an upticks in rents so long as supply stays low and demand stays high. However, there may be some flattening upon the new industrial developments in the city.
